NEW HAVEN:

1873.

INTRODUCTORY.

The apparent growth and enterprise of Gloversville seemed to warrant the publication of the present volume as an index of its prosperity; and the publishers have endeavored to embody in its pages all facts and details, pertaining to its business and mercantile interest and thus give that prominence which it deserves. We have made the best use of all means at our disposal to further this end, and have met with that encouragement from its citizens, which has warranted us in sparing neither time, or labor, to furnish as correct a Directory as circumstances would allow.

With an increase of the present enterprise of the place it is not unsafe to predict still greater advancement in the future than in the past, and ere another issue, not only the manufacturing interest, but the population itself must be greatly enhanced, and Gloversville will be able to rank among the leading interior villages of the Empire State. Johnstown, which is also comprised in this volume, is the County seat of Fulton County, and is worthy of note more particularly on account of its ancient landmarks, and old historic reminiscences.

Thankful for favors at the hands of our patrons, and with a hope that the Gloversville and Johnstown Directory may be a welcome messenger and subserve all the interests for which it was designed,

We are respectfully yours,

THE PUBLISHERS.
